

‘Religiosity, ideology and voting’ 10-12 January 2012 (Milan, Italy) University of Milan – Department of Social and Political Sciences For further information contact please contact Paolo Segatti (paolo.segatti@unimi.it)

“Religion seems to be back in many European countries. It is not clear, however, how and why religion is back. It is not even clear the extent to which is religion properly back in European secularized countries or if religious conflict might also be activated by non-religious actors. In fact, political parties as well as religious institutions should be considered part of the picture. January 10-12 2013 scholars from different countries will convene in Milan, at the Department of Social and Political Sciences of Università degli Studi di Milano, to participate to a workshop that means to be preliminary to a collective volume on electoral alignments and conflict in secular societies”

Invited paper-givers: Bernt Aardal (Institutt for samfunnsforskning), Stefano Bartolini (European University Institute), Jaak Billiet (Katholieke Universiteit Leuven), Ferruccio Biolcati Rinaldi (University of Milano), Kerman Calvo (Universidad de Salamanca), Bruno Cautrès (CEVIPOF, Paris), Héctor Cebolla (UNED, Madrid), Karel Dobbeleare (Katholieke Universiteit Leuven Martin Elff (University of Essex), Piero Ignazi (University of Bologna), Giedo Jansen (Radboud Universiteit Nijmegen), David Johann (Universität Wien), Sylvie Kritzinger (Universität Wien), NanDirk degraaf (Nuffield, Oxford), Romain Lachat (Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Barcelona), Radek Markowski (ISPPAN, Warsaw), José Ramón Montero (Universidad Autónoma de Madrid), Michael Marsh (UCD, Dublin), James Tilley (Nuffield, Oxford), Sigrid Rossteurscher (Frankfurt), Paolo Segatti (University of Milano), Cristiano Vezzoni (University of Trento), Kenneth A. Wald (University of Florida)